

Supporting Your Child's College Admissions Process

~Whitney Bruce, College Consultant~

When the media trumpets rising college costs and 5% admission rates to selective colleges, how do you consider both your child's best interests and the uncertain transition to higher education? We will discuss tips for approaching the middle and high school years with emphasis on empowering our children. These developed skills will naturally lead to independent students who think carefully about their post-secondary options and present themselves authentically in the college application process.
